

Chronic disease in the workplace is affecting your employees – Find out how you can combat this growing problem, and how Sun Life can help

February is Heart Health Month and Integrated Health Solutions from Sun Life is offering a free webinar based on the latest Sun Life Bright Paper, “Chronic disease in the workplace: focus on prevention and support”.

Delivering on our promise to share insights with you, this webinar addresses chronic disease, its impact on the workplace and how you can mitigate the risk to your organization and support the health and well-being of your employees.

It's startling to hear that over half of Canada's workforce has a chronic medical condition, costing the Canadian economy, and employers like you, $122 billion in lost productivity*. These long-term conditions, like heart disease, diabetes and depression, can create serious health concerns for your employees and have pronounced impacts on your workplace productivity and benefit plan costs**. And employees are looking to employers for support***.

What can you do?

The good news is that many chronic conditions are more preventable and manageable than ever and employers are ideally positioned to take action. Join us for the free webinar, “Chronic disease in the workforce: focus on prevention and support”, being held on February 28th, where you'll learn more about the latest research on chronic disease and steps you can take to prevent and manage the impact chronic disease can have on your workforce.
