

Sharing our insights on how you can help manage absence and disability in your organization – a panel discussion about chronic disease in the workplace

On May 25th, Sun Life sponsored a panel discussion for the Benefits and Pensions Monitor Meetings & Events 'Disability Trends & Risks' conference.

Sun Life's Director of Organizational Consulting for Integrated Health Solutions (IHS), Youlanda Hart, participated at the event, discussing disability management and the integrated approach employers should be taking to ease the transition back into the workplace.

The discussion focused on the future of the workforce, the aging population and employee expectations when it comes to employer support for their health. Employers have a role in helping employees manage their health, by taking a strategic, integrated approach to organizational health.

What can you, as the employer, do to manage these risks?

Start by reading this article, which goes into more detail about the panel discussion and the current findings around the impact of chronic disease in the workplace. You can also find out more about chronic disease in the workplace by reading the Bright Paper, Chronic disease in the workplace: focus on prevention and support.

Questions?

Contact your Sun Life Financial group benefits representative.